About Marc:

Marc Salloum, at just 14 years old, holds the distinction of being the youngest HoFH Patient Ambassador from Lebanon, offering a unique perspective from the younger generation. Committed to advocating for better care and support for individuals with Homozygous Familial Hypercholesterolemia (HoFH), Marc channels his personal experiences with the condition into driving efforts to promote early diagnosis, effective treatment options, and comprehensive patient care.

Despite his young age, Marc's advocacy knows no bounds. His passionate advocacy is fueled by firsthand knowledge, making him an empathetic judge for the competition.

Marc's presence as a HoFH Patient Ambassador underscores the importance of amplifying voices from all generations in the fight against rare genetic disorders. His commitment to raising awareness and advocating for change serves as an inspiration to both his peers and the broader community, demonstrating the power of determination and empathy in effecting positive change.
